AY, did his sister wonder what could Joseph see in a mild, silent little maid like that? And was it awful in that narrow house, with God for babe and spouse? Say, then, the simple, female sort, each one, apt to find him in husband and in son.

Nothing to this came strange in this. The wonder was that wonderful bliss; Wonders, for though True Virgin lives not but does know (How it none ever yet confessed) That God lies really in her breast, Of things he made his special nest And so.

All mothers worship little feet And kiss the very ground they've trod, But, ah, thy little Baby Sweet, Who was indeed thy God!

LEGEND OF THE MAGI.

The legend of the Wise Men of the East, as they are styled in the original Greek, "the three Magi," became, under monastic influence, one of the most popular during the middle ages. The Scripture nowhere informs us that these individuals were kings, or that their number restricted to three. The legend converts the magi into kings, gives their names and a minute account of their stature and the nature of their mission. Melchior, we are thus told, was king of Arabia, the smallest man of the three, and he gave the Savior a gift of gold. Balthazar was king of Chaldea, and he offered incense; he was a man of ordinary stature. But the third, Jasper, king of Tarshish, was of high stature, "a black Ethiopian," and he gave myrrh. All came with "many rich garments belonging to king's array, and with a multitude of people to do homage to the Savior, then a little child 13 days old."

The barbaric pomp involved in this legend made it a favorite with artists during the middle ages. The picture of "The Offering of the Magi," which we publish, is from a circular plate of silver chased in high relief and partly gilt, which is supposed to have formed the center of a mirror or large brooch, used to fasten the decorated cope of an ecclesiastic in the latter part of the fourteenth century.

The Empress Helena, mother of Constantine the Great, found what she considered the burial place of the three kings, and their remains were removed to Constantinople and interred in the church of St. Sophia. Later they were removed to the Cathedral of Milan, and in the twelfth century to Cologne, where they still lie, in a magnificent reliquary, enriched with gems and enamels. These relics are enveloped in velvet and decorated with embroidery and jewels, so that only the upper part of each skull is seen.

The custom of Carol Singing, appears to be as ancient as the celebration of Christmas itself. The word "carol" is believed to be derived from the Latin "cantare," to sing, and "rola," an interjection expressive of joy. In the early ages of the church the bishops were accustomed to sing carols on Christmas day among their clergy. In process of time these Christmas hymns became very much secularized, and latterly were nothing more than festive chants sung during the revelries of the Christmas season.

In his "History of English Poetry," Warton notes a license granted in 1562 to John Tysdale for printing "Certain goodly carowles to be sung to the glory of God," and again "Christmas carowles, authorized by my Lord of London." This may be regarded as a specimen of the carowles made at the time of the Reformation to supplant the old popular carols by compositions of a more devout character, and in Scotland instances of the same policy are found in the famous "Gude and Godly Ballades" and "Ane compendious book of Godly and Spiritual Songs."

RIOTOUS SOLONS.

Illinois Apportionment Bill Passed Amid Tumultuous Scenes.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 7.—Amid scenes of riotous disorder and intense excitement, the house yesterday passed the Republican apportionment bill by a vote of 79 yeas to 54 nays. There were but two votes to spare. It was a hairbreadth escape from defeat for the Republican managers. Representative Patrick Meany, of Chicago, saved the bill for the Republican organization. He furnished the seventy-seventh vote necessary to pass the measure and when he ended a speech with the words "I vote, yeas," State Treasurer Henry Heister, a Republican leader, who stood at his side, trembling with anxiety and excitement, flung his arms about Meany's neck and hugged him as though he were a long lost son returned from the Klondike. Representatives Funk and Seregin, the McLean county kickers, then voted for the bill, making 79 in all.

It was a dramatic end of the apportionment fight in the house. The Democrats shouted and jeered, and did their best to make so much noise that business could not be transacted. A score of their loudest tongued men mounted their desks and started a hubbub that was maintained until two calls of the roll were finished. So great was the tumult that everybody in the state house was drawn to the scene and the floor of Representatives hall was crowded with excited men, whom neither the speaker's gavel nor the sergeant-at-arms could control.

The Senate is certain to pass the bill the first week in January. The bill provides for a Republican reapportionment of the legislative districts of the state. According to the Democrats the reapportionment is a gerrymander. The Republicans assert that the changes simply correct the outrages alleged to have been perpetrated in the last Democratic gerrymander of the state. So clever was the Democratic map-making that, under existing conditions, it is necessary, Governor Tanner, Republican, declares, for the Republicans to carry Illinois by at least 50,000 majority if the Republican party is to control the state legislature.

MRS. BOOTH'S ILLNESS.

Volunteers Believe It Largely Due to Cerebral Treatment.

New York, Dec. 7.—At the Presbyterian hospital a bulletin on Mrs. Booth's condition showed that there had been no improvement whatever. There is little hope for her recovery. Her malady is assumed to be cerebral. Regarding the statement that Mrs. Booth's illness was in any way due to mental troubles, produced by the separation from the Salvation Army, Commander Booth preferred not to speak, but referred the matter to Secretary Hallmann, of the Volunteers, who said:

"From the commander to the young member of the Volunteers, we all believe that Mrs. Booth's illness is due to a great extent to the cerebral treatment she has received at the hands of various persons since the separation from the Salvation Army."

THE NAME CAME BACK.

And for awhile the Doctor Could Not See the Humor of It.

It is a familiar contention among psychologists that an incident once thoroughly presented to the human mind cannot be effaced from the memory, says the Washington Star. In this connection Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, the well-known missionary to Turkey and the founder of Robert College, Constantinople, is reported as telling a humorous story. Among Dr. Hamlin's friends and substantial helpers was a Philadelphia gentleman, whose name could not be recalled by the doctor, who was then in Turkey. Every incident connected with their interviews, even to the street and number of the house in which his benefactor had lived, was as plain to the doctor as if the events had occurred but yesterday, but to save his life he could not think of the gentleman's name. As time went on this failure of memory caused him serious annoyance and he adopted all sorts of expedients to bring back the name. He would take the letters of the alphabet, one at a time, and think over all the surnames he had ever heard, but to no avail. Then, in his imagination, he would start down the street where his friend had lived, enter the house, go through the ceremony of introduction and repeat word for word, as nearly as he could remember it, the conversation which had taken place between them, but still he could not recall the name. When, after thirty years, he returned to his native land on a visit, he took the trouble to go to Philadelphia, in order to settle the question which had been puzzling him so long. He visited the house, but found only strangers, who could tell him nothing of the people who had lived there so many years before. So finally Dr. Hamlin abandoned the search, thinking that here at last was a case where something had been thoroughly presented to the human mind and as thoroughly effaced.

One night, after he had returned permanently to this country, he attended a large dinner where were several distinguished psychologists. During the evening the conversation turned upon the subject of the memory and the well-known scientific principle was discussed. This was too good an opportunity to relate his experience at length as an example of the opposite of what he was, of course, listening to with great interest, and as he approached the end of his story he said, with great impressiveness: "Gentlemen, there was an incident presented to my mind more than forty years ago, and I have not been able to think of the name of Capt. Robinson from that day to this." When his climax was greeted by a hearty burst of laughter, the worthy doctor looked round in great astonishment, for he thought he had told a pretty good story and could see nothing in it to provoke mirth. It was some time before the truth of the matter dawned upon him.

A. F. Stiles of Oklahoma's National Guard Attacked By Four Men.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Dec. 5.—Just as Colonel D. F. Stiles of the Oklahoma National guard was about to board the southbound Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe passenger train to go to Oklahoma City last night, four unknown men, who stood in the shadow of the depot, pelted him with rotten eggs, which bespattered his clothes from head to foot. He and a policeman seized one of the men, who struggled and escaped in the darkness without being recognized. The policeman shot at the fugitive, but did not hit him.

A DIVER'S DANGER.

Thrilling Escapes from Death While Recovering Treasure from a Ship.

One diver crippled for life, another made a raving lunatic and still another escaping death by a mere shave—that is the record up to date of the effort to recover the treasure on the sunken steamship Skyro, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The Skyro, bound from Cartagena to London, struck on the Melidide reef and sunk in twenty-eight fathoms, low water. The Melidide reef is on the coast of Spain, nine miles south of Cape Finisterre. The accident occurred in 1891 and it was not until four years later, May 1895, that any attempt was made to recover the valuable cargo which the sunken steamship contained, the most tempting part of which consisted of twenty-eight bars of silver, valued at $45,000. This treasure was stored away in a safe berth in the cabin, while in the hold was 700 tons of pig lead valued at $70,000. It was an Englishman, living at Bilbao, who made the first attempt on the treasure. After four or five months' labor and terrible underwater work by the divers, all that the Englishman had to show for his time and money was a grimy piece of the Skyro's brass cabin skylight grating. One of the divers went raving mad from his sufferings under water and when confined jumped through a window in his delirium. A fellow-worker was incapacitated for life as a result of his exposure. The gentleman then let things rest at this point until last year. During the last month following the beginning of these second operations a diver descended forty-four times and recovered fifty-nine bars of silver, the average time of each descent being thirteen minutes. After the first thirty-seven bars had been got to the surface it was found necessary to use dynamite. The dynamite so cleared things that in three dives the same diver brought up over $10,000 worth of silver bars. But even this adept at submarine work did not come off without some close calls during his career. On one occasion in coming up he fouled his air pipe with a float attached to the buoy rope. He was ascending with a strong impetus and the impact with the float turned him downward and his head slipped out of the helmet below the breastplate. He could neither right himself nor replace his head, but he never for an instant lost his presence of mind, but worked swiftly and deftly with his hands in this reversed position. He managed to free the air pipe and shot up to the surface, feet foremost, where he was quickly reversed by his assistants and restored to the world after such a close call as it is the lot of a very few men to survive.

Colds quickly caught are more quickly cured by Reg's Cherry Cough Syrup. Wallace & Mueller and Vanderpool's drug store.

LADIES' CLUB OF PARIS.

Gave a Party to Celebrate Its Birthday.

The Ladies' Club has just given a party to celebrate its birthday, says a Paris correspondent of London Truth. Men were invited, a theatrical performance was given by amateurs, all members of the club with the exception of one, who was a man. Gen. Fervier, the grand chancellor of the Legion of Honor, was among the guests and stayed until the ball which followed. Mme. de Marry, the president, told several men that the club was primarily intended for unmarried ladies and widows. She is on her guard against the demi-monde elements, which, as I have remarked, is always a lurking danger, threatening feminine gatherings outside the circle of private life. No candidate is put up without a searching inquiry into her private life and she must give references. The Ladies' Club is a very tame adaptation. What would militant members of the Pioneer say to this by-law: "No married lady is eligible unless with her husband's written consent?" This is disappointing. One of the grievances of the woman's rights party is the French law which prevents a married woman from carrying on business unless with her husband's consent. This was one of the most oft-quoted instances of the unfairness of man-made law. Here was a chance to proclaim the independence of the French woman. The committee of the Ladies' Club has missed it. Perhaps the conclusion is to be drawn that women, like men, have the prejudices of their time and country.
